Report for the Year 1899-1900.

Read at the Council Meeting held in the Audit Room of the Chetham Hospital, Manchester, October 24th, 1900.

SINCE the last Annual Meeting, held on the 23rd October, 1899, one volume has been issued to the Members. This is volume 40, being the third volume of Pleadings and Depositions in the Duchy Court of Lancaster from the reign of Edward VI. to that of Philip and Mary.

The second volume for the year should have been Major Parker's "Calendar of the Assize Rolls for Lancaster to the reign of Edward I."

This was put in the printer's hands more than a year ago, but after a portion had been printed off, Major Parker received orders to proceed with his regiment to South Africa, where he has remained ever since, and the issue of the volume has consequently been delayed. Major Parker hopes to resume it on his return home, an event which is looked forward to now in the near future.

When it became evident that this volume could not be completed, Mr. Sutton and Mr. Axon very kindly offered to commence at once the first volume of the Manchester Quarter Sessions Records, which, as stated in a recent Report, had been transcribed at the expense of the Manchester Corporation from a newly discovered manuscript. This is now well in hand, and should be issued to the Members as a second volume for the year 1899-1900 at an early date. For the current year Mr. Farrer is editing a number of Lancashire Court Rolls, temp. Edward II., and with it, it is hoped that a second volume of the Manchester Quarter Sessions Records will be printed.

The following is a complete list of the Society's publications already printed up to the present time :

INTRODUCTION.

For the maintenance of peace, the administration of justice, and the general conduct of public affairs, the country was at an early period divided into counties, the county into hundreds or wapentakes, and the latter into townships or vills. Of these three divisions, the two greater ones had each a Court. Sometimes the township, or a group of townships, was coincident with a manor, and the manor also had a Court. The "County" was not, however, a district or extent of country, it was a large community and it was also a Court. So also the "Wapentake"—a name, formerly, of more general use in Lancashire than Hundred—was a smaller community, and was also a Court. Sometimes, as in the case of the Wapentake of Blackburn, the baronial Court for the Honour of Clitheroe became merged in the "Wapentake," both being coincident with the fief granted to the de Lacy family. In other cases, the "Wapentake," i.e., the Court of the Wapentake, was shorn of some of its townships, which became appendant to a baronial court, such as that of Penwortham. The creation of this barony eliminated the "Wapentake" of Leyland, i.e., the Court, and it became merged in the baronial Court of Penwortham, together with the following townships in Amounderness, Prees, Broghton, Whittingham, Claughton, Freckleton, Warton and Bankhouses, Newton, Elswick, Kellamergh and Brining.* So again the "Wapentake" of Salford had no jurisdiction within the lordship of Rochdale, manor of Tottington, nor within those manors which belonged to the barony of Manchester. On the other hand, the "County" had jurisdiction over all other courts, whether baronial or hundredal.

The "County" met once every six weeks under the presidency of the Sheriff, or one of the coroners, or their deputy. It was attended by judges or doomsmen (judices, judicatores), by suitors (sectatores), certain freeholders of the shire required by their tenure to do suit to it (facere sectam), and by the township and constable of each township in the persons of two or four freeholders. Juries were also sent from each of the wapentakes to present offences, trespasses, defaults, accidents, and other matters which had come under their view, or about which the Crown desired to be certified. The records of the Courts are usually drawn up in a routine manner. After the heading cited in the last footnote, follow the fines laid upon doomsmen or judges for absence at either or both of the two great yearly Courts, which were usually held after Easter and Michaelmas; then follow the names of the suitors and the fines laid upon them in like manner, then the names of the townships (villatæ) and constablewicks (constabulariæ), with the names of two or four persons appearing at each of the two great courts, or the fine imposed for failing to appear. After that the business of the Court is put on record.

While the "County" was nominally held every six weeks,

* See the Roll of the "Curia Apparencie" or Court of Appearance of Penwortham, held there on Oct. 21st, 13 Henry VIII. (1521), before Henry Faryngton, esquire, chief steward there. (Duchy of Lanc., Court Rolls, Bundle 78, No. 1021, m. 4).

it is probable that the various suitors just described were only obliged to attend the two great courts yearly. They were probably summoned to attend the others by notice, and if the King sent his writ to the Sheriff he might summon a special Court at any time.

Many of the actions brought in the "County" are appeals of assault, or trespass with force and arms. There are many actions for debt, and not a few personal actions, such as that referred to in the Fine Roll, 1 John, m. 8, where Hugh Bussel deraigned the barony of Penwortham against Geoffrey Bussel, in the Court of John, Count of Mortain, when he was lord of Lancaster. In this case, as very frequently happened, the judgment was obtained wrongfully, and the case was removed into the King's Court, where so heavy a fine was laid upon Hugh Bussel, that he was fain to sell his barony to the Constable of Chester in return for an acquittance of the said fine. As a rule, the "County" dealt only with the initial proceedings in criminal cases. It is a matter for regret that no roll of any "County" Court of Lancaster has been preserved to our time, but there are many presentations—apparently made in the "County"—recorded on the Palatinate of Lancaster Plea Rolls from Henry IV. onwards, and mention of suits commenced in the County is frequently found in the Rolls of Justices of Assize, Coram Rege, and the King's Bench.

The inferior Court of the Wapentake was held once every three weeks, and judging from the rolls here printed, and from the rolls of later "Wapentakes," there appears to have been little if any difference as to suitors and judges between it and the "County." The inquisitiones post mortem contain frequent references to estates held by military service or in socage, and by doing suit to "County" from six weeks to six weeks, and to "Wapentake" from three weeks to three weeks. Actions to resist distraint for suit of court are often traceable in the Final Concords.*

Again, there seems to have been little difference between the procedure of the baronial courts and the "Wapentake." Where there was much land held "by barony," the proceedings of the "Wapentake" seem to have been confined to actions for trespass with force and arms, and for recovery of debts under forty shillings and breach of assize, byelaws, etc. The present volume affords examples of each class of Courts.

The introduction to this volume is not the place for a disquisition upon the administration of justice in the County and Wapentake in early times. Those who are curious for information on the subject are referred to Pollock and Maitland's History of English Law, Bishop Stubbs' Constitutional History of England, the Publications of the Selden Society, and kindred works. But one or two extracts from Assize Rolls throwing light on the subject of suit of court to the county and wapentake or baronial court in the thirteenth century, may not be considered out of place here:—

At Lancaster, on the morrow of Holy Trinity, 40 Henry III. (12th June, 1256), a final agreement was made between Roger de Lancaster, plaintiff, and Gilbert de Lancastre, deforciant of customs and services which Roger claimed from Gilbert of the free tenement which he holds of him, to wit the manor of Harteshop (Hartshope Hall, near Patterdale), of which he claimed homage, and the service of the 20th part of one Knight's fee, suit to his Court of Barton from three weeks to three weeks, and that he should find a "Witnesman" to testify to summonses and attachments in the said Court, and that he should find puture for the land serjeant of the said Roger when he should pass through Gilbert's said manor to make summonses and attachments, which services Gilbert has not acknowledged.

Gilbert acknowledged that he and his heirs will henceforth render to Roger and his heirs homage for the said manor, and the service of the 10th part of one Knight's fee, and do suit at the said Court when any plea shall be in the same Court by the lord King's writ of right (breve de recto), and when a thief shall be in the same Court to be judged, and likewise towards the strengthening (per afforciamentum) of the Court, if any of Roger's men or of his heirs be impleaded in the County, and the said Roger and his heirs on that account seek to have their own Court, the said Gilbert and his heirs will there do their suit until that plea be ended.* Likewise if a record ought to be made in the County of any plea tried (placitatus) in the Court of Roger or his heirs, Gilbert and his heirs, together with other of Roger's free men and his heirs, will make that record in the County, for all services, suit of Court, custom and claim.

For this concession Roger released to Gilbert and his heirs all the right he had to claim other customs or services of the said manor of Herteshop. And let it be known that it shall not be lawful for Roger or his heirs to take the beasts of Gilbert, his heirs or his men, nor to make any distress for default of suit or for any trespass except (nisi) by the consideration of the freemen of Roger's and his heirs' court; but if Gilbert's, his heirs' or his freemen's beasts be found in the forest of Roger or his heirs, or in any loss (in aliquo dampno), it shall be lawful to Roger and his heirs to take and detain those beasts until Gilbert and his heirs find pledges to make amends for that trespass or loss by the consideration of the court of the said Roger and his heirs for ever.

Briefly stated, the agreement provides for the limitation of suit due by Gilbert de Lancaster to his lord, to suit of court when the King has sent word by his writ that the court do right between two parties, one of whom has sought

* i.e., if through his forced absence at the County, Roger's Court was deficient in suitors to make judgments, Gilbert will do suit there until the business be terminated.

the King's assistance, or when a thief has been taken and awaits judgment, or when the lord and some of his usual suitors are unavoidably absent at the "County," and his Court of Barton needs afforcement to deal with some case awaiting trial, or if a case be removed for trial to the "County" out of a baronial or minor court, necessitating the appearance of suitors of the court, where the first trial was made, to make record. These suits, together with homage and military service, are to be the utmost limit of service, suit, and custom demandable from Gilbert to Roger.

At Appelby, on the quindene of St. Hilary, 11 Henry III. (27th January, 1227), a final ageement was made between William de Lancastre, son of Gilbert, son of Roger, son of Reinfrid, of the one part, and Robert de Veteri Ponte, of the other part, respecting doing suit at the County [Court] of Westmorland in respect of the lands of the said William in Kendal and in Westmorland, whereof the said William complained that the said Robert unjustly exacted suit from him, and wherefore there was a plea between them in the same Court.

William granted that he and his heirs from henceforth will do suit at the said County for the said lands by their steward or their other bailiff if he or his heirs shall not be able or shall not wish to come in their proper persons. And if such pleas shall be attached or summoned respecting the men living in the lands of the said William or of his heirs, wherefore the barons ought to have their Court according to the custom of England, the steward of the said William or his heirs shall demand the Court of his lord therefore, and shall have it without contradiction. And if there shall be contention between the sheriff and the steward respecting holding a Court, it shall be [determined] by the consideration of the County whether he ought to have it or not. And the sheriff of Westmorland shall have in the land of the said William and his heirs, of Kendal, two servientes ad equum and itinerating on foot when there shall be need for doing the matters of the Lord the King and the sheriff, and for securing and preserving the peace. Which serjeants in the full County shall swear on their oaths that they will not trouble or unjustly harm any man of the said lands or treat them (tractabunt) contrary to the custom of the kingdom. Nor shall they collect sheaves in the autumn. Nor shall they exact lambs. Nor to any . . . shall they cause any extortion (malam tollam). And where they shall take hospitality they shall behave themselves with moderation. And they shall conduct themselves without molestation to the host of an honest house. Nor shall they take any money for remitting hospitality. And the sheriff's serjeants shall itinerate in the lands of the said William and his heirs, in Westmorland outside Kendal, as they were wont to itinerate there. Also all men living in the said lands shall faithfully help the said serjeants, when there shall be need, to keep the King's peace and to do their business. Robert also granted that if summonses ought to be made by the men of Kendal, they will make them respecting suits moved in the land of Kendal; and that they shall not be drawn to remote parts of Westmorland for summonses and other light causes. And the steward or bailiff of the said William shall do the said suit for the knights and other men of the lands of the said William and his heirs, unless perchance they be drawn into a plea, or for afforcement of any judgment, and then he shall take with him to the next County of the knights and the discreet and wise men of Kendal to perform that judgment together with others. And for this grant Robert quitclaimed to William and his heirs the damages which he said he had by reason of the said contention.

In this case the baron of Kendal had been withholding suit to the "County" from the baron of Westmorland. By the agreement the former undertakes to do suit there for his lands of Kendal and in Westmorland, the latter district at that time only embracing the northern part of the present county, or what is known as the Bottom of Westmorland. But he obtains an acknowledgment of his right to have his own Court, apart from the County, to adjudicate in cases arising among his own tenants, subject to the consideration of the County. Also the baron of Kendal consents to the Sheriff having two horse or foot serjeants executing summonses and attachments, and keeping the peace within his lands of Westmorland outside Kendal, subject to their reasonable behaviour and moderation in taking hospitality, and also that his tenants shall help the serjeants to keep the peace when there is need. The other provisions explain themselves.

The following extract from the sessions of the Justices of Assize at Lancaster, in 20 Edward I., 1292, shows that puture was due by custom to the serjeants of the peace when riding or walking about the Wapentake in the execution of their office, and that the office of "Witness-man" was incidental to residence within the Wapentake.

At Lancaster, on the Octave of Holy Trinity, 20 Edward I. (8th June, 1292), Adam de Osbaldeston was summoned to answer William de Baldreston of a plea that he should acquit him of the service which Henry de Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, demands from him of his free tenement which he holds of Adam in Baldeston, whereof Adam, who is mesne, ought to acquit him, Wherefore he says that whereas he ought to hold of him 2 oxgangs of land in the said vill, by homage and the service of 2s. for scutage when it shall happen (ad scutum cum euenerit), and for the service of one pair of spurs, and for one sor sparrowhawk, for all service and demand, the said Earl demands from him puture for a certain horse serjeant of the said Earl itinerating in the latter's name in the Wapentake of Blakeburn, to make summonses, distresses and attachments; and likewise to find one man who is called "Wytnesseman," who ought to attest the same, whereof Adam ought to acquit him; and for default of acquittance he has loss to the value of 100s.

Adam came, and demands to be shown why he ought to acquit William. The latter says that in the 40th year of King Henry, father of the now King, a Fine was levied in this County before the Justices Itinerant, between Richard, son of William de Baldreston, ancestor of the said William, and Thomas de Osbaldeston, ancestor of the said Adam, whereby Thomas acknowledged two oxgangs of land to be the right of Richard, and that he would warrant, acquit and defend those oxgangs against Edmund de Lacy, then Earl of Lincoln, and against every one, touching suit of Court, customs, services and demands, for the aforesaid services, in perpetuity. And he proffers part of a certain Fine which testifies this.* And Adam is mesne between the said William and the Earl and ought to acquit him. He also says that the use and custom of the country is, that the said Earl and his bailiffs of Blakeburneshire do not receive, nor were wont to receive the aforesaid puture of any one, nor are any to be admitted to the office of "Whytnesman," except of the residents in the said Wapentake. So that no resident, although he may be willing, is unable to acquit another. (Ita quod nullus residens licet velit alium acquietare non potest.)

The jury say that William is not distrained by the Earl for default of acquittance of the said Adam, because they say that the Earl's bailiffs take their puture by reason of residence, of whomsoever is tenant in the said Wapentake, and that puture have so been accustomed to receive from time immemorial, for their good-will when they should come (pro voluntate sua cum venerint). Nor are any admitted to the office of "Wytnesman," except by reason of the said residence in the Wapentake. And therefore it is considered that the said Adam shall go sine die, and William shall take nothing by this assize, but be in mercy for a false claim.

The Courts held in the County during the thirteenth to the sixteenth century, which are, in some cases, still held to the present time, are—"The County," usually held at Lancaster every six weeks; "The Wapentake," held in various places in each of the Wapentakes of West Derby, Salford, Amounderness, and Lonsdale, every three weeks; 3 Leet or Baronial Courts held at (1) Manchester, (2) Warrington, (3) Widnes, (4) Newton in Makerfield, (5) Penwortham, (6) Clitheroe, (7) Rochdale, (8) Tottington, (9) Garstang, (10) Hornby, (11) Muchland, (12) Ulverston, and (13) Dalton in Furness; for the respective baronies of (1) Grelley, (2) Boteler, (3) the Constable of Chester, (4)

Banastre, later Langton, (5) Bussel, and later de Lacy, whose original barony was (6) Clitheroe, who also acquired the lordship of (7) Rochdale, (8) Montbegon, and later, de Lacy, (9) the Barons of Kendal, (10) Montbegon, and later, Nevill, (11) Le Fleming, and later, Harrington, (12) Barons of Kendal, and (13) Abbot of Furness.

The Rotuli de Quo Warranto, published by the Record Commissioners, disclose the existence in 1292 of many special franchises, in particular jurisdictions carrying with them the privilege of holding a Court Leet or Court Baron.

4 The Halmote, or the court of the demesne manor, was held in a large number of townships too numerous to mention, in fact, wherever land was cultivated by bondsmen or nativi. In this volume are mentioned three in Blackburn Hundred, two in West Derby on the comital demesne, and three in Lonsdale Hundred. There were also others, such as Sefton, and the two comital Manors in Amounderness Hundred, Ribby and Wray, and Singleton. Many of these courts are still familiar to us. In addition to these important series of courts, there were 3 Woodmotes for the chases, Portmotes for the boroughs, a peculiar court at Wigan for the recognition of debts, and others of minor importance too numerous to mention.

A few words as to the various licences, admittances, and liberties granted or renewed by fine, and trespasses, defaults, and other misdemeanours usually punished by the imposition of amercements. Firstly, there were the fines on entry, or for admittance to land, at one time held in bondage at the will of the lord, in which we see the genesis of the copyholder's admittance, but later held by prescriptive right, or "according to the custom of the Manor," usually at a yearly rent of 4d. the Lancashire acre, duplicated at a new entry; secondly, fines or amercements for failing to prosecute after having instituted proceedings, or for false charges, false claims, or defective pleading, or for licence to withdraw from a suit, or to make an agreement; thirdly, amercements for breach of the various assizes of victuals; fourthly, licences to pursue various trades or handicrafts; fifthly, amercements for making default of suit of court or of homage; sixthly, escapes of beasts, horses, sheep, or swine, agistment, impoundage, sale of estrays or wreck; seventhly, detainue of goods, chattels or debts; eighthly, failing to produce persons put to bail or surety ("mainprised"), or to appear as a plaintiff to sue, or defendant to answer in a plea; and lastly, the heterogeneous class of peace breach, pound breach, and trespass. Many instances of all these emendable acts or defaults, liberties, licences, and customs, will be found in this volume, to which the searcher will find reference facilitated by means of the Index Rerum.

A few words respecting the terms used in the translation of these Rolls. Judex and Judicator has been translated "Doomsman," or Judge. In the History of English Law, I, p. 535, a doubt is expressed as to the actual occurrence of the term, "Doomsman." In Lancashire we have actual proof of the use of the term in the case of Down-Litherland, where a family held lands in consideration of finding a suitor or Doomsman to the Wapentake of West Derby, and to the County. In consequence of this service, the holder of the estate acquired, at a very early date, the name, "le Deman," occasionally appearing in the awe-inspiring form of "le Demon," i.e., the deem man, or he who deemed dooms. Subsequently, i.e., in the fourteenth century, the name became established as "le Demand," and seems to have died out before the beginning of the fifteenth century. Abundant evidence exists to prove that these Judges, or Doomsmen, and not the officer who presided over the court, made judgments. Even in the presence of the King's own Justices, the Doomsmen in the Wapentake and County deemed dooms. It was, no doubt, to the advantage of justice, custom and common sense, that this office should be hereditary. Cockshutt is a curious word which I have not previously met with, except as a surname. In the two instances where the word occurs in these Rolls, it is probable that it refers to some particular "shot" of land in the town-fields, to which the term, "cock," or chief, was applied. Possibly it was another term for head-butt, or head-rigg. Where persons proffered sums of money to have the "Aid of the Court," it is, I think, undoubted that they sought the assistance of the court to enforce some agreement, or judgment given, to secure the quiet enjoyment of an easement or custom, or in the collection of services or debts. The "common fine," or "common amercement," which is mentioned occasionally, is the general amercement laid upon the whole County, or one of the Wapentakes, for default, or concealment of some misdemeanour by the County, or respective Wapentake. Those who paid sums for respite or acquittance of this common fine, appear to have done so in order to compound for their quota. The "Lord's defence" must, I think, refer to the hedge or fence raised by the lord of the manor or vill around his several wood or pasture, to separate that which he used and enjoyed "in severalty," from that which the township enjoyed "in common."

In conclusion, a word should be added to account for the preservation of these Court Rolls of the 17-18 Edward II., when all other earlier Rolls, and almost all the later ones, have been lost or destroyed. It is well known that Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, held the whole of the County and Honour of Lancaster until his forfeiture and attainder for rebellion. During the years following his execution, which took place at Pontefract, on March 22nd, 1322, his lands and the lands of many of his adherents remained in the King's hands as escheats, and in the Record Office there are preserved three large Rolls of the issues and outgoings of these lands, called "Contrarient's lands," extending from the fifteenth year of Edward II. to, in some cases, the last year of the reign. This explains the preservation of the splendid series of records relating to the County for the sixteenth and seventeenth years of this reign. They were sent up to London in response to the demands of the Exchequer. The Rolls for subsequent years until the act of restitution, were not demanded, consequently, they remained in the County, doubtless at Lancaster Castle, that relentless devourer of historical materials in time past. We ask what has become of the series of Assize Rolls, the Plea, Patent, Close and many of the Chancellors' Rolls of the Palatinate for the latter part of the fourteenth, much of the fifteenth, and in some cases even a portion of the sixteenth centuries? They appear to be irretrievably lost, so that it is most difficult to follow the history of township and manor during the period extending from A.D. 1361 to the accession of Henry VIII. in A.D. 1509. Fortunately, there are in Lancashire many splendid collections of private muniments, generally well cared for, and which, as a rule, are not denied to the examination of the serious historical student. It is to be devoutly desired that they may be well cared for and safe guarded in the future.

The bulk of the labour of transcribing and translating the original rolls, has fallen upon my Secretary, Mr. Thomas Price, who has spared no pains to decipher as far as possible the mutilated places in the parchments, and passages where the writing has faded, in order to recover as much of the originals as the ravages of nearly six centuries have left it possible to do.
